

TEXAS

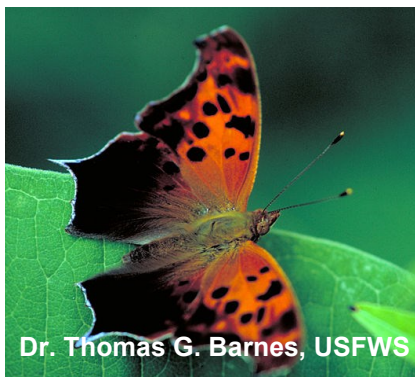

BUTTERFLY MONITORING NETWORK

The Texas Butterfly Monitoring Network is Looking for Volunteers!

The Texas Butterfly Monitoring Network is a long-term citizen science project formed in cooperation with the North American Butterfly Monitoring Network. We will be drawing on surveys conducted by interested citizens in order to monitor and assess the state of the butterflies in Texas.

Surveyors will monitor the same route nine times between March and November and will report on all the butterflies they see. This data will be entered into a database utilized by all the participants in the North American Butterfly Monitoring Network.

Texas has more butterfly species than any other State in the USA. Long-term monitoring is crucial for conservation of our wonderful butterfly species, and you can help!

Dr. Thomas G. Barnes, USFWS

Jim Hudgens USFWS

If interested sign up to become a monitor at texasbutterflies.org!